This report is the result of careful research and analysis by several contributors. Grace Poore and Hetana Patel were superb collaborators and co-authors. Grace Poore researched hundreds of clippings to identify and organize eligible cases, write several drafts, design graphs, and integrate her theoretical understanding with her advocate's heart to ensure victims are described and remembered with dignity. Hetana Patel did invaluable research for subsequent versions of the report, patiently combing through the details to ensure the accuracy of our final tabulations. They both endured the changes and endless push for near-perfect accuracy by Chic Dabby with fortitude.

Neil Websdale's research and intellectual contributions to the field of domestic violence related homicides is unsurpassed, and we have benefitted greatly from his work. As the co-director of the National Domestic Violence Fatality Review Initiative, he made its database available to our researchers; provided theoretical clarity in his book Understand-ing Domestic Homicide; and offered immeasurable help in numerous conversations.

We thank the National Resource Center on Domestic Violence for supporting the research and policy work of the Asian & Pacific Islander Institute on Domestic Violence by providing some of the funding for this project.

We are deeply grateful to service providers across the country – they contributed close to half the data in this study. The API Institute acknowledges the powerful work of advocates serving Asian and Pacific Islander battered women – their efforts to prevent domestic violence have increased safety and healing in the lives of so many abused families.

Executive Summary

Background

The Asian & Pacific Islander Institute on Domestic Violence has identified and focused on domestic violence related homicides as a critical issue affecting Asian, Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander battered women since 2001. Shattered Lives: Homicides, Domestic Violence and Asian Families establishes the complexity of the problem and its far-reaching effects on women, children, families, and communities.

Goals

This report's goals are to raise awareness of the problem in order to counter denial and victimblaming; generate discussions that will inform culturally-specific intervention, prevention and community organizing strategies; influence the field so safety for battered women takes into account an expanded definition of domestic violence related homicides; and develop questions for future research.

Methods

Newspaper clippings collected over a six year period from 2000-2005 by advocates, state coalitions and the National Domestic Violence Fatality Review Initiative were the primary data source for this report. We included cases where domestic violence or family violence was explicitly mentioned or could reasonably be inferred. Despite a thorough search, we may have missed some newspaper reports.

We analyzed data from a total of 160 cases of domestic violence related homicides in Asian, Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander families, spanning 23 states. We identified 14 types of homicides, defined by the perpetrator's relationship to the victim(s). These were differentiated into homicides and homicides-suicides to calculate the number of cases in each type; and further categorized into single and multiple killings, i.e. two or more victims killed by a single perpetrator.

Selected Findings

- 160 cases resulted in 226 fatalities, of which 72% were adult homicide victims, 10% were child homicide victims, and 18% were suicide deaths.
- Three types of homicides dominated: intimate partner homicide with 81 cases, intimate partner homicide-suicide with 34 cases, and non-intimate family killing with 25 cases.
- 78% of victims were women and girls, 20% were men and boys, 2%ⁱ unknown.
- 83% of perpetrators were men, 14% were women, 3%ⁱⁱ unknown.
- 68% of victims were intimate partners (either current, estranged, or ex-partners).
- Almost one-third (59 out of 184) of total homicide victims were wives.
- Children were the second largest group of homicide victims and the primary victims of familicides (13 out of 20 victims). Over two-thirds (14 out of 22) of all children killed were age 5 and below.
- Perpetrators' in-laws and parents of girlfriends were the third largest group of victims.
- 118 out of 184 victims were killed in the home.

Recommendations for Service Providers

- 1. Use this report to increase awareness of the problem and its gendered nature, and to discuss risks and safety with domestic violence survivors.
- 2. Learn to recognize risk factors for homicide victimization and perpetration, incorporating cultural differences.
- 3. Use danger assessment tools and discussions at several stages of the relationship to gauge victims' risks; particularly before and after leaving an abuser.
- 4. Assess danger to a victim's family and friends, especially if they are providing emotional and other support to her/him.
- 5. Develop safety plans for clients, children and extended family members.
- 6. Screen batterers for homicidal and/or suicidal risks regularly.
- 7. Screen survivors for homicidal and/or suicidal risks regularly.
- 8. Address physical and psychological harms caused to children by injuries, exposure to homicide and suicide, and post-homicide custody battles.
- 9. Educate family and community members to take victims' stories and fears seriously.
- 10. Conduct a fatality reviewⁱⁱⁱ that groups together Asian, Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander victims in states with a high density of these populations.
- 11. Improve identification of domestic violence related homicides so events such as mercy killings, car accidents, contract killings of immigrants in their home countries, and intimate homicide in same-sex couples are properly categorized as intimate killings.

¹ No information available on sex of 4 victims (2 victims in a collateral killing, 2 unborn children).

[&]quot; No information on sex of 5 accomplices.

Fatality reviews analyze cases to identify the warning signs of intimate homicide, homicide-suicide, familicide, etc., to refine policies and procedures to prevent such killings.

Recommendations to Researchers

- 1. Integrate gender analysis into research on intimate homicide because this is not a genderneutral issue.
- 2. Analyze how domestic violence related homicides in Asian, Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander families are similar or different from other communities and what this implies for intervention and prevention.
- 3. Assess trauma of children exposed to homicides, homicide attempts/threats, and posthomicide custody disputes to inform policies that minimize custody battles.
- 4. Collect disaggregated data on ethnicity of victims and perpetrators and make it available even if such information is deemed statistically insignificant.
- 5. Carry out multi-variable analysis to identify characteristics such as age and gender of victims and perpetrators, to understand homicide risk and preventative factors.
- 6. Identify protective factors and strategies that can prevent domestic violence survivors and children from becoming homicide victims.
- 7. Investigate what distinguishes batterers who commit homicide, from those who commit familicide.

. INTRODUCTION

The Asian & Pacific Islander Institute on Domestic Violence of the Asian & Pacific Islander American Health Forum identified domestic violence related homicides as a critical issue affecting Asian and Pacific Islander battered women in 2001. Shattered Lives: Homicides, Domestic Violence and Asian Families establishes the complexity of the problem and its far-reaching effects on women, children, families and communities. This report's goals are to raise awareness of the problem in order to counter denial and victim-blaming; generate discussions that will inform culturally-specific intervention, prevention and community organizing strategies; influence the field so safety for battered women takes into account an expanded definition of domestic violence related homicides; and develop questions for future research.

Terms such as femicide, intimate homicide, or domestic homicide are used in the field to describe killings perpetrated within an abusive and intimate relationship. We have used the term domestic violence related homicides because in addition to intimate, romantic partners; victims may include a couple's young or adult children, ex-partners, family members such as parents or other relatives, extended family members such as in-laws, non-intimates, and bystanders. All such killings are referred to as domestic violence related homicides whether their stories publicly detailed a history of battering prior to the killing or not. We do want to iterate that contrary to media and public opinion, domestic violence related homicides are not 'crimes of passion' where killers suddenly 'snapped' but are by and large, carefully executed plans that involve deliberation and extensive monitoring of intimate relationships.

We have paid equal attention to victims and perpetrators, for different reasons. Victims' ages, ethnicities, their relationships to their killers and the circumstances of their killings are carefully detailed. Looking at domestic violence related fatalities through the lens of who gets killed is crucial to understanding the struggles of battered women to survive their abusive relationships. "Who did the killing?" is also a critical question. It reminds us who is responsible for these deaths; bringing into sharp focus the relationships that batterers hijack for the final time when they transition from abusers to killers.

1. Research Data

We analyzed data from a total of 160 cases of domestic violence related homicides in Asian and Pacific Islander families, from 2000-2005, spanning 23 states. However, the total number of domestic violence related homicides may be higher than the number of cases we found and reviewed.

2. Data Sources

Newspaper clippings on domestic violence related homicides were the primary data source for this report, obtained from the following:

- a. National Domestic Violence Fatality Review Initiative¹ which maintains a database of newspaper clippings;
- b. Advocates and service providers across the country who collect local or ethnic-specific data and responded to a call on the Asian & Pacific Islander Institute on Domestic Violence's listserv;
- c. Femicide reports from the state coalitions of Minnesota, Oregon, Texas, Washington and Wisconsin; and
- d. Clippings on file at the office of the Asian & Pacific Islander Institute on Domestic Violence.

3. Criteria for Inclusion in Study

We included cases where domestic violence or family violence was explicitly mentioned or could reasonably be inferred. The following deaths and victims were included:

- a. Homicide by an abusive, intimate, romantic partner;
- b. Homicide by a victim of domestic violence;
- c. Homicide that resulted in the death of all or some of the intended victims and/or bystanders;
- d. Victims who were current or previous intimate partners; their biological, adopted or step-children; family members of a victim or perpetrator; and non-family bystanders;
- e. Victims with a familial, but non-intimate relationship to the killer these include homicides of members of the extended family, the marital family, and/or the family of origin;
- f. Victims and perpetrators of Asian and Pacific Islander ethnicity; and
- g. Killings between January 2000 and December 2005 in the United States.

We excluded four cases of attempted but unsuccessful adult homicides 2 and four child homicides. 3

4. Limitations of the Study

This report does not claim to be an exhaustive study of all the domestic violence related homicides in the Asian and Pacific Islander population from 2000-2005 in the U.S. There were the following limitations to the data available for review:

- a. National, state and local data was gathered almost entirely from press clippings and we could have missed several stories.
- b. Case information is limited because it depended on what was presented in newspaper articles. In fatality reviews, extensive, multi-sourced information is reviewed and analyzed but that was not within the scope of this project. Fatality reviews have access to extensive information, like coroner's reports, interviews with family and/or community members, and system responses, such as police reports.
- c. The process of identifying the ethnicity of victims and perpetrators relied on (i) names that were recognizably Asian and Pacific Islander, (ii) references in a newspaper article to the ethnicity or country of origin of either victim or perpetrator, and (iii) information from advocates in community-based-organizations and state coalitions. When we were uncertain about ethnicity, we omitted the case from the study.
- d. The data is on deaths in the continental U.S. and Hawai'i; we could not unfortunately get data from the Pacific Island territories or jurisdictions.
- e. Domestic violence related homicides may not be identified as such in same-sex or same-gender relationships and that we have only one case in this study reflects on the paucity of data, not on the number of such homicides.
- f. Status of cases and what happened to perpetrators is limited by available data at the time of research.
- g. This report does not compare Asian and Pacific Islander homicides to data about other ethnic groups.
- h. Finally, from a strictly research point of view, some of the results represent small numbers and are not statistically significant, but we have presented them because they are socially meaningful.

We have been extremely careful in describing the victims – their names, ages, and ethnicities; and the locations, dates and means of the homicides; and cross checked these details against the information in the newspaper clippings. We apologize for any errors, especially to family and friends of victims who may see this report.

. TYPES OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE RELATED HOMICIDES

In a six-year period, there were 160 cases and 14 types of domestic violence related homicides, resulting in 226 fatalities. Types of homicides were defined by the perpetrator's relationship to the victim(s).

Types of homicides were further differentiated into homicides and homicides-suicides to calculate the number of cases in each type.

Finally, we differentiated between single and multiple killings, i.e. two or more victims killed by a single perpetrator. In multiple killings, we classified each victim – based on her/his relationship to the perpetrator – into a separate type of homicide. For example, in one event a wife, her sister and her mother were killed by the wife's husband; the wife killed in this event was counted as one case under Intimate Partner Homicide and her sister and mother (the perpetrator's sister-in-law and mother-in-law respectively) were counted as one case under Extended-Family Killing

Across all 14 types of homicides, there were three groups of fatalities: adult homicide victims (72%), child homicide victims, (10%) and suicide deaths (18%).

Intimate Partner Homicide: Results

51% or 81 of 160 cases in this study were intimate partner homicides in which 81 partners and an additional 8 victims were killed by 85 perpetrators (81 intimate partners and 4 accomplices), resulting in a total of 89 fatalities.

- Of the 81 partners killed, 86% (70) were women and 14% (11) were men.
- Of the 81 partner victims there were:
 - □ 40% (32) wives
 - □ 17% (14) girlfriends
 - \Box 14% (11) ex-girlfriends
 - \Box 11% (9) estranged wives
 - □ 7% (6) husbands
 - 11% (9) others: of which there were 3 ex-wives, 2 boyfriends, 1 ex-husband, 1 estranged husband, 1 ex-boyfriend (same-sex) and 1 female ex-fiancé
- Of the 8 non-partner victims, there were:
 - □ 5 extended-family members
 - □ 2 collateral victims
 - □ 1 sexual competitor
- Of the 85 perpetrators, 86% (73) were men and 14% (12) were women.
- Of the 85 perpetrators in intimate partner homicides, there were:^b
 - □ 38% (32) husbands
 - □ 17% (14) boyfriends

Intimate Partner Homicide-Suicide: Results

21% or 34 of 160 cases in this study were intimate partner homicide-suicides in which there were 39 victims^c (34 partners, 4 collateral victims, and 1 sexual competitor) and 34 perpetrators, all of whom committed suicide; resulting in a total of 73 fatalities.

- Of the 34 partner victims of intimate partner homicide-suicide, 94% (32) were women and 6% (2) were men.
- Of the 32 female partner victims, 62% (20) were wives, who comprised the largest group of victims.
- Of the 34 perpetrators of intimate partner homicide-suicides, 94% (32) were men and 6% (2) were women.
- Of the 32 male partner perpetrators, 62% (20) were husbands, who comprised the largest group of perpetrators.

c In some fatality reviews, both deaths in a intimate partner homicide-suicide may be referred to and/or counted as victims. We have only referred to those who were killed as victims.

d In general, mercy killings and suicide pacts require careful review to establish if domestic violence was present in the relationship. If there was a history, an abuser may have convinced a partner to agree to a suicide pact but without any intention of going through with their own suicide. Similarly, a mercy killing in the context of an abusive relationship could involve an abuser manipulating or coercing an ill partner into accepting a unilateral decision. Furthermore, in suspected cases of domestic violence related homicides, the adult children of a couple can be unwilling to have an elderly parent investigated for homicide.

B. Non-Intimate Family Killing

In this group of homicides, members of the family of origin or of the extended family are killed. In some situations, it is unclear if there was any family violence prior to the killing or if it was unreported.

Child Killing: Refers to the killing of children or step-children by a parent or step-parent, within a domestic violence context. Child killings caused by long-term neglect or child abuse are not included in this report.

Extended-Family Killing: Killing members of one's extended family, including in-laws

Patricide: Killing of a father by his child(ren)

Matricide: Killing of a mother by her child(ren)

Parricide: Killing of both parents by their children^e e Researchers identify three kinds of perpetrators who kill their parents: "severely abused children, severely mentally ill children, and dangerously antisocial children." More than 90 percent of youth who kill their parents were abused by their parents. C. Familicide

1. Familicide

Familicide is a killing in which a parent or step-parent kills a current or ex-partner and one or more of the couple's children and/or children from a previous relationship. According to researchers, familicides are overwhelmingly carried out by men.¹⁴⁵

2. Familicide-Suicide

In a familicide-suicide, the familicide perpetrator commits suicide. Three separate studies confirm that almost all (97%, 94% and 92%) familicides-suicides are perpetrated by men.¹⁴⁶

Familicide and Familicide-Suicide: Results

4% or 7 of 160 cases in the study were familicides and familicides-suicides, in which 20 victims were killed by 7 perpetrators, resulting in a total of 24 fatalities (including 4 suicides).

- Of the 20 victims of familicide, 13 (65%) were children (including 2 unborn), and 7 (35%) were adults (6 wives and 1 husband).
- Of the 7 perpetrators of familicide, there were 6 husbands and 1 wife.

D. Other Domestic Violence Related Homicides

Four types of other domestic violence related homicides are included here: collateral killing, sexual competitor killing, contract killing, and honor killing. These killings may occur in conjunction with other types of homicides. Results and case details are presented separately under each type of killing.

Other Domestic Violence Related Homicides: Results

8% or 13 of 160 cases in this study are other domestic violence related homicides that include collateral killing, sexual competitor killing, contract killing, and honor killing, in which 21 victims were killed by 17 perpetrators.

- Of the 16 victims of other domestic violence related homicides, there were 7 women, 7 men and no information on 2 victims.
- Of the 17 perpetrators of other domestic violence related homicides, all were men, of which two committed suicide after collateral killings and one after a sexual competitor killing.

1. Collateral Killing

An incidental killing done in the commission of another domestic violence related homicide aimed at a targeted victim. Collateral victims do not have an intimate or romantic relationship with the targeted victim and can include unknown bystanders or individuals known to the targeted victim, such as friends.

Collateral Killing: Results

- There were 3 cases of collateral killings in which there were 6 victims (3 women, 1 man, 2 unknown), and 3 perpetrators (all men).
- In all 3 cases, perpetrators had also killed their partners.

2. Sexual Competitor Killing

A new romantic partner is killed by an estranged or ex-partner, who is seen as a 'competitor.' The term is coined from the phrase, "killing the competition" which refers to eliminating a sexual or romantic rival.¹⁵⁷ In some instances, the killer murders the estranged partner along with the 'competitor'. Such deaths are sometimes called love-triangle killings, but that does not adequately capture the danger and intimidation involved in these situations; and it implies that a person who has separated from an abusive partner is still in love with this ex-partner.

Sexual Competitor Killing: Results

- There were 6 cases of sexual competitor killings in which there were 6 victims (all men) and 6 perpetrators (all men).
- In two cases, perpetrators had also killed their partners.

3. Contract Killing

A family member or abuser hires a contract killer to murder a relative, an intimate partner or other targets. (Also referred to as Murder for Hire)

Contract killings can be hard to identify because they can appear as homicides committed by strangers rather than domestic violence related homicides. Failed domestic violence related contract killings may not show up in the data, although one killing did show up in our data.¹⁶⁴ With immigrant battered women, contract killings may be ordered and executed in their home country when the victim is there on a visit, and would not show up in the data here.

Contract Killing: Results

- 3 cases were contract killings in which 7 perpetrators^f killed 3 female victims.
- Of the 3 male perpetrators who hired the 4 contract killers, there was one fiancé, one estranged husband, and one father-in-law.

f For our study, we only counted the victims' relatives and their hired contract killers, and not the additional accomplices about whom there was no information.

4. Honor Killing

A young or adult woman is killed because her family perceives her to have brought dishonor to their family. In their view, dishonor is caused when women behave in ways that go against cultural norms (e.g., deciding to leave an abusive husband); when women disobey familial expectations or assert their own wishes in opposition to their family's (e.g., having an unauthorized romantic relationship); or when women are raped or sexually violated. Family honor is supposedly "restored" by killing her for the transgression. Honor killings are typically carried out by male members of a woman's immediate family, often with the active or tacit complicity of the victim's mother and/or her participation.

Accurate data is hard to obtain because a family in the U.S. planning an honor killing could have the intended victim return to the home country and carry it out there.

Honor Killing: Results

There was one honor killing case, with one female victim and one male perpetrator.

The newspaper report states that the husband in this case told investigators that he "attacked his wife and daughters to restore family honor that was lost when his wife and oldest daughter were sexually assaulted by his brother, and his youngest daughter was sullied by a medical exam."¹⁶⁹ The man did not attempt to punish his brother who perpetrated the incest. His two sons, aged 17 and 19, were not around when he carried out the attacks on his wife and daughters.

Shattered Lives

CHILDREN: FATAL AND NON-FATAL VICTIMS

We identified a total of 182 children (aged 0-17) in this study. Twenty-two children were killed, 63 were victims of failed homicide attempts or were present at a family homicide in various ways. There was no information on the remaining 97 children.

A. Fatal Victims

Child fatalities were found across all 4 types of homicides: non-intimate family killings, familicides and extended family killings; in some cases followed by the perpetrator's suicide.

Results: Child Fatalities

9% or 14 of 160 cases in the study involved child fatalities across all types of homicide.

B. Non-Fatal Victims

Non-fatal victims include children of the victim or perpetrator or both, who may have survived a homicide attempt aimed directly at them, children with non-fatal physical injuries, and/or children with psychological injuries resulting from the domestic violence related homicide of, or by, a parent or step-parent.

Results: Surviving Children

- There were a total of 160 non-fatal child victims.
- No information was available for 97 of the surviving children.
- Of the 63 surviving children for whom information was available:
 - □ 60 were on site when the homicides occurred
 - □ 17 saw the killing
 - □ 7 found their mother's dead body and/or bodies of other victims
 - □ 4 children, some under 10 years of age, either called police or went to neighbors for help
 - □ 3 survived attempted killings but were severely wounded
 - □ 2 children intervened to try to prevent perpetrator from committing suicide
- Children exposed to homicide or homicide-suicide ranged in age from 7 months to 12 years.
- Large family size increased the number of children exposed to homicides. During an intimate partner homicide-suicide, 13 children in one Hmong family were home.¹⁸⁴ Eight children in another Hmong family were home when their father killed their mother, then turned the gun on himself in front of his 4-year-old.¹⁸⁵

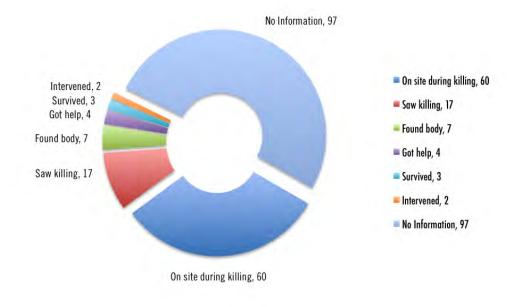

DIAGRAM 5. NON-FATAL CHILD VICTIMS

Harm Done to Surviving Children

Surviving children of domestic violence related homicides often become invisible. We draw attention to the issues that affect them so that appropriate advocacy is provided to meet their short-term and long-term needs. Children suffer physical and psychological harm resulting from dealing with the grief and traumatic loss of their siblings, mother, both parents, and extended family members.

Being present when a homicide is committed exposes children to the double trauma of witnessing^h a parent's –typically their mother's– violent death and witnessing the other parent mount a homicidal attack and/or commit suicide. Discovering their parent's body and/or the bodies of other victims and the body of a perpetrator who commits suicide can inscribe indelible memories. Children and teens may be overwhelmed by guilt, helplessness or failure because they feel they should have tried or been able to stop the homicide. Testifying in court if they were present or in the house during the killing can re-ignite many of the original traumas.

Children who survived an attempted homicide have to deal with their own physical and psychological injuries. They may harbor fears about being in further danger, especially if the killer has not been apprehended. If they were living in a household of multiple batterers who had victimized their mother, their fear and lack of trust in caregivers will be heightened. Victim-blaming by community and family members can confuse and outrage children.

h The term 'witnessing' has a range of meanings that can include being an eye witness, an ear witnesses, hearing a re-telling of the event by family or third party members, discovering the bodies, viewing the crime scene, and being present at domestic violence incidents historically or just before the homicide.

When there is a wide age range among siblings, they will have different reactions to loss. Older siblings may be expected to look after the younger ones, and their own emotional needs get overlooked. Children will have fears and anxieties about their future: whom they will live with and if there are teen or young adult children, they worry about how they will provide for the family and keep it together. If it is a large family, the siblings can be split up and placed in different homes. Finally, children can and do become the focus of custody battles between the maternal and paternal families. Cultural prescriptions about whose family the children belong to and access to resources and/or immigration status can affect custody determinations. For example, a murdered woman's family members can lose custody of their grandchildren because they reside outside the U.S. in their home country, because they are uninformed of legal procedures in the U.S., or because they have less power and financial resources than the perpetrator's family.

V. VICTIMS AND PERPETRATORS

Two hundred and twenty-six fatalities resulted from the 160 domestic violence related homicide cases in this study. Of the 226 deaths, 184 fatalities were victims of killings and 42 fatalities were suicides committed by perpetrators. 58% (93 of 160) of the cases were single killings and 42% (67) involved multiple killings.

A. Victims

Of the total of 185 victims in this study, female intimate partners killed by their abusers are the largest group of victims.

Of the total of 185 homicide victims, there were 125 intimate partners and 59 other victims.

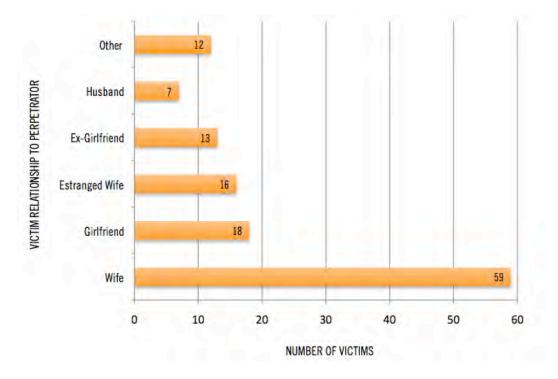

DIAGRAM 6. INTIMATE PARTNER VICTIMS

All other victims total 59 individuals, but represent 68 relationships. When there were multiple perpetrators, there were multiple relationships. For example, Pik Ng (single victim) was neglected and starved to death by her son and her daughter-in-law (multiple perpetrators), so she is counted as a mother and a mother-in-law; representing a duplicated number. Six victims were killed by more than one perpetrator.¹⁸⁶

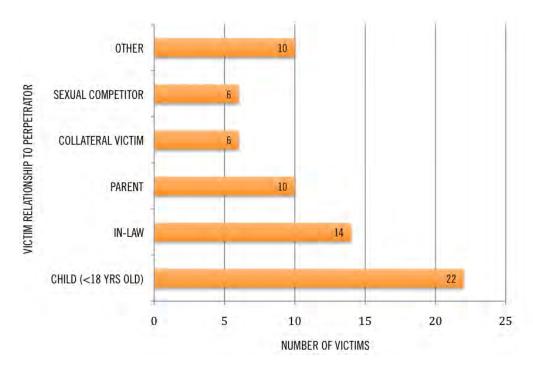

DIAGRAM 7. ALL OTHER VICTIMS

Although it is not uncommon in Asian families for women to be abused also by their fathersin-law, mothers-in-law, brothers-in-law, and/or sisters-in-law; in the time period of this study we found two cases where in-laws killed a daughter-in-law.¹⁸⁹ Instead, there were several cases where battered women's natal family members were killed by her intimate partner, i.e. their son-in-law.

B. Perpetrators

There were a total of 160 perpetrators for the 160 cases in this study: 78% (125) were intimate partners of their victims from the following types of killings: intimate partner homicide, intimate partner homicide-suicide, extended-family killing, familicide, familicide-suicide, contract killing, and honor killing.

All other perpetrators total 35, but represent 68 relationships because 23 of the 35 perpetrators killed more than one victim. For example, in one familicide case (Rapoza, Raye Lynn), a husband killed his wife, child, and unborn child. Below, the perpetrator is counted as a husband and father twice, since he was the father of two children. Thus the individual perpetrator represents a duplicated number.

C. Demographics

1. Sex

Victims' Sex

- Of the 184 adult and child victimsⁱ of domestic violence related homicides, there were:
 - \Box 72% (132) female adults^j
 - □ 15% (28) male adults
 - \Box 7% (12) female children
 - \Box 4% (8) male children
 - □ 2% (4) no information on sex (2 unborn children and 2 adult collateral killing victims)

Perpetrators' Sex

- Of the 160 perpetrators of domestic violence related homicides, there were:
 - □ 83% (133) males^k
 - □ 14% (22) females
 - □ 3% (5) no information on sex (4 perpetrators of contract killings and 1 perpetrator of a intimate partner homicide; all 5 were accomplices to killings)

i Although no information was available on the age of 10 victims, it was safe to assume based on case details, that all of them were adults.

j Two girlfriends were minors, but are counted as intimate partner victims and not child homicide victims.

k Although no information was available on the age of 12 of the male perpetrators, it was safe to assume based on case details, that all of them were adults.

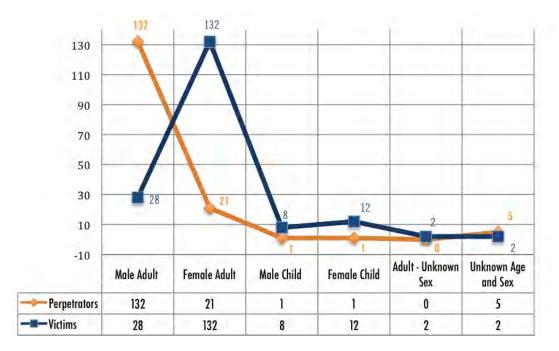

DIAGRAM 10. GENDER OF VICTIMS AND PERPETRATORS

2. Ethnicity

Domestic violence and domestic violence related homicides occur in all ethnic populations and in all Asian, Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander ethnic groups. The Asian ethnic groups that showed up in the study's 160 cases included victims and perpetrators who were Bangladeshi, Burmese, Cambodian, Chinese, Filipino, Hmong, Indian, Iraqi, Japanese, Korean, Kyrgyz, Laotian, Malay, Pakistani, Thai, Turkish and Vietnamese.¹ There was no specific ethnic breakdown for Pacific Islanders except in two cases where the data indicated one perpetrator was from Guam and the other from Micronesia. Except where noted, perpetrators were of the same ethnicity as victims. We caution against drawing conclusions about risk or prevalence rates based on ethnicity data presented in this report.

Victims' Ethnicity

The 184 homicide victims in our study were:^m

- □ 86% (158) Asian¹⁹⁰
- □ 8% (14) Other Ethnicityⁿ (African American, Latino, or White)
- □ 3% (5) Pacific Islander
- □ 2% (3) Mixed Heritage
- □ 2% (4) Unknown Ethnicity

- m All percentages in this report are rounded to the nearest whole number and therefore do not always add up to 100%. When percentages are not rounded (added from the tenth or thousandth decimal) all percentages equal 100%.
- n In the study, we included victims of other ethnicities who were killed by an Asian or Pacific Islander partner.

I Iraqis and Turks are included as West Asians, Kyrgyz as Central Asians.

Perpetrators' Ethnicity

The 160 perpetrators of domestic violence homicides in this study were:

- □ 76% (122) Asian¹⁹¹
- □ 13% (20) Other (African American, Latino, or White)
- □ 5% (8) Pacific Islander¹⁹²
- □ 6% (10) Unknown Ethnicity

3. Age

Age information was available for 95% (174) of victims and 92% (147) of perpetrators. Young women and older women were equally vulnerable to being killed.

- Of the 144 female victims, 14 female victims were above 55 years of age and 20 females were between 15 to 24 years old.
- Young men were as likely as old men to kill their partners: 14 perpetrators were under 25 years of age and 10 perpetrators were above 55 years of age.

There was a wide age spectrum of victims and perpetrators, as illustrated by some examples: a 19-year-old Indian son bludgeoned and set fire to his 60- and 50-year old father and mother;¹⁹³ a 49-year-old Chinese son starved to death his 81-year-old elderly mother;¹⁹⁴ a 16-year-old Vietnamese girl stabbed and killed her 19-year-old boyfriend;¹⁹⁵ a 41-year-old Turkish husband fatally stabbed and bludgeoned his 39-year-old wife with a hammer and also attacked his two daughters, ages 4 and 22.¹⁹⁶

D. Method and Location of Homicides and Suicides

1. Homicide Methods

Stabbing and shooting were the two most common methods used.

- 33% (62) victims were shot
- 29% (52) victims were stabbed
- 6% (15) victims were killed by perpetrators using multiple methods^o
- 5% (10) victims were strangled
- 4% (8) victims were bludgeoned with an object
- 13% (24) victims were killed by other means, as follows:
 - inflicted with lethal head injuries (6)
 - □ slashed with a knife, including having wrists and throats cut (5)
 - \Box vehicles used to kill (5)^p
 - \Box set on fire (2)
 - □ starved and medically neglected (2)
 - □ killed with mothers (unborn children) (2)
 - \Box beaten (1)
 - □ decapitated (1)
- No information was available for remaining 9% (13) of individuals.

Perpetrators attempted to conceal their victims' bodies post-homicide. For instance: a White boyfriend of a Korean woman buried her body under odor-masking kitty litter in the basement of their home where it was found several months later by police responding to friends' concerns;¹⁹⁷ an Indian husband hid his wife's corpse in a suitcase left inside a dumpster in a nearby apartment complex where it was discovered by police, along with her decapitated head and severed arms and legs;¹⁹⁸ a 19-year old man (ethnicity unknown) dumped the body of his Filipina ex-girlfriend in a creek where a road crew found her remains four years later;¹⁹⁹ a newly married Chinese husband hid his wife's body under the cover of their swimming pool;²⁰⁰ a White husband beat his wife's head into the floor, left her body inside a Land Cruiser and drove it into a half frozen creek;²⁰¹ a White husband of a Korean woman concealed her body in plastic wrap and duct tape after killing her with a hammer.²⁰²

Multiple methods included beating and strangling; beating and stabbing; clubbing and stabbing; stabbing and bludgeoning; shooting and stabbing; smothering and setting on fire; stabbing and setting on fire; stabbing and strangling; strangling and suffocating; strangling, beating and stabbing; punching, stomping and bludgeoning.

p A Filipino husband drove his wife and 4-year-old child off a sea cliff in their family vehicle (he survived);¹⁴⁹ an Indian husband chased his wife with the family minivan after she refused to ride with him, then ran her over in the parking lot of a shopping center;¹² a Hmong husband ran his wife off the road in a car chase, then rammed her car into a tree, killing both of them;¹¹⁰ an Indian husband ran his wife down with his car after an argument⁵⁶.

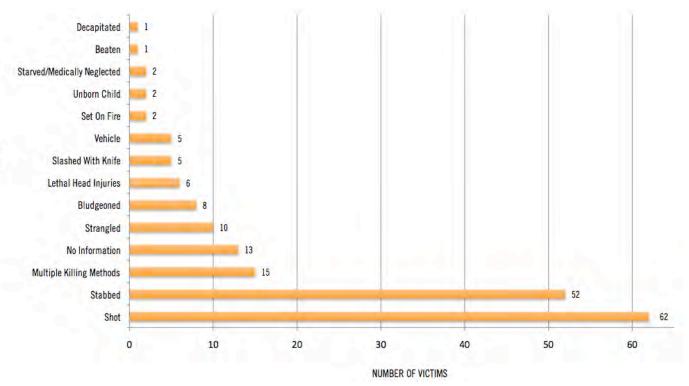

DIAGRAM 14. HOMICIDE METHODS

2. Suicide Methods

- 42 (26%) of 160 perpetrators committed suicide
- Of the 42 perpetrators who committed suicide:
 - □ 69% (29) perpetrators turned a gun on themselves
 - □ 19% (8) used other methods: hanging, drug overdose, stabbing, wrist cutting, setting fire^q, and using a vehicle
 - \Box No information was available for 5 (12%) of the suicides

3. Location of Killings

- 184 victims were killed in the following locations^r:
 - \Box 64% (118) within the sanctuary of a home
 - □ 10% (19) in public places including hotels, parks, restaurants, parking lots, and other public places
 - \Box 5% (10) inside a vehicle
 - \Box 3% (5) at a victim's work place
 - □ 1% (2) at service facilities, a hospital and a psychotherapist office
 - □ No information was available for remaining 30 (16%) individuals

q One husband set fire to the basement after bludgeoning his wife. He and his wife died in the fire.

E. Actions Taken By Domestic Violence Victims

Victims of domestic violence make covert or overt attempts for help to minimize danger. Since we are relying solely on the data from newspaper clippings, we have limited information. Actions such as seeking help from family, calling domestic violence hotlines, going to shelter or non-shelter programs, turning to religious personnel, and/or seeking medical or mental health services do not appear in the data – some of these actions are likely to be kept private by battered women and are kept confidential by service programs.^s Fatality reviews reveal a series of actions to give a more accurate picture, but such review is beyond the scope of this study.

A total of 94 actions taken by 61 victims fell largely into two categories: turning to the legal system for help and separating from an abuser.

- 30 actions involved the criminal and civil legal system: 16 victims obtained restraining orders,^t 9 called the police, 5 cooperated with the District Attorney's office pressing charges.
- 47 actions involved separating from an abusive partner: 24 victims had separated, 8 were in the process of leaving, 8 started divorce proceedings, 5 had divorced, and 2 had moved out.
- 11 actions involved individuals starting a new relationship.
- 6 other actions included 4 victims asking friends and co-workers for help and 2 sought therapy.

r All percentages in this report are rounded to the nearest whole number and therefore, do not always add up to 100%. When percentages are not rounded (added from the tenth or thousandth decimal) all percentages equal 100%.

s In Washington state, battered women residing in shelters have an option to sign a confidentiality waiver in the event of their death, which permits advocates to disclose that the victim had sought their services.

t Three homicide victims had rescinded their restraining order (one when she moved with her husband from Hawai'i to California and two when their partners went to a counseling program for batterers).

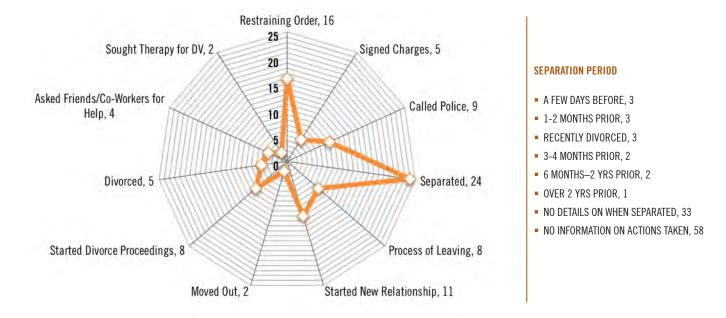

DIAGRAM 15. ACTIONS TAKEN BY VICTIMS PRECEDING HOMICIDE

Utilizing the Legal System

Thirty victims (27 women, 3 men) used the civil and criminal legal system, resulting in the following sanctions against batterers (some faced more than one sanction):

- 20 batterers were served with protection orders^u
- 9 batterers had police called on them (in one case several times)
- 8 faced other sanctions: 3 were court mandated to batterer intervention programs, 2 were arrested but not charged for domestic violence, 2 were sent to jail for prior domestic violence

Separating from Abuser

Leaving a violent relationship is a process,^v not a single event, and can be marked with increased risk and levels of endangerment for battered women. Stalking and surveillance are present in many abusive relationships and can intensify following a temporary or permanent separation.^w Several narratives clearly show that estranged or former husbands and boyfriends u We did not include three protection orders that were rescinded on the request of victims who attempted reconciliation. They were all subsequently killed (Erlinda Millon, 2000; Raye Rapoza 2002; Marisa Corpuz, 2004.)

v For example: two women stopped living with a boyfriend but stayed in the relationship; one woman had tried to leave her boyfriend several times before he killed her child.

w We refer to this as post-separation violence (instead of separation violence) because it emphasizes the batterer's use of violence, rather than the victim's decision to separate.

were monitoring their ex-partners' activities. A Vietnamese woman was stabbed to death by her ex-boyfriend who had stalked her prior to killing her.²⁰³ An Indian woman was shot and killed by her estranged husband while she was dropping off her five-year old daughter at day-care. Although his wife had a protection order against him, he followed her to the day-care and killed her inside the center.²⁰⁴ A Vietnamese woman was shot at work by her estranged husband. They had been living apart for five years.²⁰⁵ A Filipina woman was shot and killed by her ex-husband seven years after they were divorced. He continued to harass and threaten her if she dated other men. On the day of the killing, he monitored her from a park outside her residence.²⁰⁶ A Chinese woman was gunned down at her workplace by her Korean ex-boyfriend a month and a half after she obtained a restraining order prohibiting him from coming within hundred yards of her. The killer called the victim every night, slept in the parking lot of her apartment building, and followed her. He also called her friends and threatened them if they refused to take his calls.²⁰⁷ A Filipina woman was stabbed to death in front of her 5- and 10-year-old children by her Mexican ex-boyfriend²⁰⁸ even though she had secured protection from law enforcement and the courts.^x

F. What Happened to Perpetrators/Killers

Suicides

- 42 killers committed suicide after they killed their partners and/or families
- 11 killers attempted suicide and failed

Criminal Justice Interventions

Given the data limitations, we could not gather a full picture of criminal justice system interventions; hence, at the time of data collection for this report:

- Of the 118 perpetrators/killers who did not commit suicide:
 - □ 45 were convicted
 - □ 33 were charged
 - □ 10 were arrested
 - □ 3 were sent to a psychiatric facility
 - □ 2 were considered self defense killings and were not charged²⁰⁹
 - \Box 2 were killed by police
 - \Box 1 was held civilly liable²¹⁰
 - □ 1 remained at large
- No information was available for 21 perpetrators/killers

x Her family, particularly her mother, Clara Tempongko, her community, and domestic violence advocates in San Francisco galvanized around her murder, raised public awareness and demanded public accountability. The family sued the city and police department and got a $500,000 settlement four years later.

Shattered Lives

V. FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

A. Findings

Shattered Lives: Homicides, Domestic Violence and Asian Families details findings from newspaper clippings collected in a six-year period from 2000 to 2005. The findings quantitatively summarize key data on the types of domestic violence related homicides in Asian families and on its victims and perpetrators. They do not analyze or compare data to findings about other population groups or to broader research on this topic.

Fatalities

One hundred and sixty homicide cases resulted in 226 fatalities: 184 individuals were killed and 42 perpetrators committed suicide after killing their victims.

Types of Domestic Violence Related Homicides

- Three types of homicides dominated: intimate partner homicide with 81 cases, intimate partner homicide-suicide with 34 cases, and non-intimate family killing with 25 cases.
- The remaining homicide types familicide, familicide-suicide, collateral, competitor, contract, and honor killings, totaled 20 cases.

Gendered Killings: Victims and Perpetrators

- 78% of victims were women and girls, 20% were men and boys, 2%^y unknown.
- 83% of perpetrators were men, 14% were women, 3%² unknown.
- Women intimate partners, at 60%, were the largest group of victims.
- 70% (7 out of 10) of men who killed children also killed the children's mother compared to 25% (1 out of 4) of women who killed their children and their partner.
- Men were by far the largest group of perpetrators. They comprised 133 of 160 perpetrators in all types of domestic violence related homicides, clearly establishing the gendered nature of such crimes.

Relationships

- 68% of victims were intimate partners (current, estranged, or ex-partners).
- Of 125 intimate partner victims, 70% were current partners (78 women, 10 men) and 30% were estranged or ex-partners (33 women, 4 men).
- Almost one-third (59 out of 184) of total homicide victims were wives.

y No information available on sex of 4 victims (2 victims in a collateral killing, 2 unborn children).

z No information on sex of 5 accomplices.

- Of the 32% (59) of non-intimate victims, 37% were children, 20% were in-laws, 17% were parents, 25% were others.^{aa}
- Perpetrators' in-laws and parents of girlfriends comprised the third largest group of victims.^{bb}

Child Victims

- Children were the second largest group of homicide victims.
- Children were the primary victims of familicides (13 out of 20 victims).
- Over one-third (60) of the 160 non-fatal child victims identified in this study were on the premises during the killing of their mothers or other family members.
- Children's exposure to violence ranged from watching a killing and/or a suicide, finding bodies of victims, to being seriously injured in the attacks.^{cc}

Other Data

Age

- 48% (72 out of 150) of adult victims, for whom age information was available, were between the ages of 18 and 35.
- Over two-thirds (14 out of 22) of all children killed were age 5 and below.

Methods of Killing

- Two-third of the victims (114 out of 184) were killed by shooting or stabbing.
- Over two-thirds of the killers (29 out of 42) used guns to commit suicide.

Location of Killing

118 out of 184 victims were killed in the home regardless of the type of killing and whether a victim had children, a new partner, or had moved out into her/his own residence or into her/his parents' home.

aa All percentages in this report are rounded to the nearest whole number and therefore, do not always add up to 100%. When percentages are not rounded (added from the tenth or thousandth decimal), all percentages equal 100%.

bb A significant number of battered women's family members and other people in her life became the killers' targets. We expected to see victims' in-laws involved in homicides because in the extended family home, there can be multiple domestic violence perpetrators. However, we did not expect to see the victims' family members, i.e., the perpetrators' in-laws as homicide victims.

cc The extent of non-fatal injuries, the exposure to killings and suicides, and the presumed pre-homicide exposure to domestic violence, imply significant psychological and physical harms to children.

B. Recommendations

Recommendations for Service Providers

- 1. Use this report to increase awareness of the problem and its gendered nature in order to discuss risks and safety with domestic violence survivors.
- 2. Learn to recognize risk factors for homicide victimization and perpetration, incorporating cultural differences.
- 3. Use danger assessment tools and discussions at several stages of the relationship to gauge victims' risks; particularly before and after leaving an abuser.
- 4. Assess danger to a victim's family and friends, especially if they are providing emotional and other support to her/him.
- 5. Develop safety plans for clients, children and extended family members.
- 6. Screen batterers for homicidal and/or suicidal risks regularly.
- 7. Screen survivors for homicidal and/or suicidal risks regularly.
- 8. Address physical and psychological harms caused to children by injuries, exposure to homicide and suicide, and post-homicide custody battles.
- 9. Educate family and community members to take victims' stories and fears seriously.
- 10. Conduct a fatality review^{dd} that groups together Asian, Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander victims in states with a high density of these populations.
- 11. Improve identification of domestic violence related homicides so events such as mercy killings, car accidents, contract killings of immigrants in their home countries, and intimate homicide in same-sex couples are properly categorized as intimate killings.

Recommendations for Researchers

- 1. Integrate gender analysis into research on intimate homicide because this is not a genderneutral issue.
- 2. Analyze how domestic violence related homicides in Asian, Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander families are similar or different from other communities and what this implies for intervention and prevention.
- 3. Assess trauma of children exposed to homicides, homicide attempts/threats, and posthomicide custody disputes to inform policies that minimize custody battles.
- 4. Collect disaggregated data on ethnicity of victims and perpetrators and make it available even if such information is deemed statistically insignificant.
- 5. Carry out multi-variable analysis to identify characteristics such as age and gender of victims and perpetrators, to understand homicide risk and preventative factors.
- 6. Identify protective factors and strategies that can prevent domestic violence survivors and children from becoming homicide victims.
- 7. Investigate what distinguishes batterers who commit homicide, from those who commit familicide.

dd Fatality reviews analyze cases to identify the warning signs of intimate homicide, homicide-suicide, familicide, etc., to refine policies and procedures to prevent such killings.

C. Concluding Remarks

This study offers a glimpse into a serious and complex problem. Male power and patriarchal control are clearly implicated in domestic violence; in homicides, they reach egregious depths. Despite women's attempts to leave their abusive relationships, to utilize the legal recourses available to them, to turn to service programs, friends and families for help, batters determined to kill do not seem deterred by legal, familial, or community sanctions.

The findings from this study can be applied to further our knowledge, build prevention and community organizing strategies, design culturally-sensitive assessments, and inform public policies. Shattered Lives: Homicides, Domestic Violence and Asian Families can mobilize communities to counter denial, confront victim-blaming, and see the enduring harms of domestic violence. We are confident that advocates and activists armed with this information can strategize anew to intervene and prevent domestic violence; and with training, identify victims at risk of homicide. We hope it can embolden victims' families to step forward in their communities when, all too often to avoid community shame, they refrain from speaking up and publicly mourning their loss. We hope that batterers' families and friends are also spurred to make their private condemnations of domestic violence public. For the victim-blamers, we hope they will see how their support for perpetrators increases the social costs of domestic violence. Above all, we honor the victims. We ask that their names, ages, dates and places of death, and their relationships to their killers remind us all of the work that remains to be done.

- A Guyanese Indian woman's contract killing, ordered by her ex-husband over a child-custody dispute, was foiled by an undercover police officer, New York, 2000. (Das Dasgupta, S., "Broken Promises: Domestic Violence Murders & Attempted Murders in the US & Canadian South Asian Communities," in Breaking the Silence, Nankani, S. (ed.). A Chinese wife survived her husband's attempt to kill her with a cleaver when their 17-year old daughter intervened; both mother and daughter were seriously injured in the attack, Oakland, CA, 2005. (Alameda Digest, August 24, 2005). A Hmong woman survived when her husband's attempt to kill her and himself failed, Sacramento, CA, 2003. ("Hmong Deaths in Sacramento," E-mail communication from Lisa Hasegawa to API Institute on Domestic Violence, October 15, 2003). Narinder Virk, 39, attempted to drown herself and her two children, ages six and nine, but all were rescued, Ventura County, CA, (Summit Proceedings API Institute, 2002). Victims' names were not available for the first three cases.
- There was insufficient information in the data for us to claim that domestic violence was present in these child abuse cases that resulted in homicides. Angelo Marinda, eight months, was violently shaken by his father after being returned to the home from foster care, where he had been placed by Child Protective Services following the father's earlier violence, Daly City, CA, 2002. ("County Ignores Warning on Baby," San Francisco Chronicle, December 28, 2002.) Justin Hallinan, 3, was drowned in the bathtub of a motel room by his father, after he was taken from the family home and gone missing, Tacoma, WA, 2000 ("Tacoma Man is Charged in Death of Son, 3, Found With Him at Motel," The News Tribune, January 6, 2000). Kayla Xuan Mai Huynh, 2, was violently shaken by her mother after soiling her underwear, Minneapolis, MN, 2002. (Femicide records of Minnesota Coalition for Battered Women.) A woman was in jail for smothering her child (age and gender information unavailable). She then attempted suicide by slitting her wrists. Names of the child and mother were not available, Idaho, 2002. (Email communication from Sue Osthoff, National Clearinghouse for the Defense of Battered Women to API Institute on Domestic Violence, November 2, 2002.)
